Bio

My goal for every client is to help them regain their physical and emotional health after an injury by using hands-on techniques and exercises. I want to teach and guide clients through the rehab process so that they can get back to the activities that make them happy, faster. I design individual treatment plans based on current research and one-on-one conversations with clients so that I address the issues that are important and relevant to them.

When I am not in the clinic you might find me cooking in the kitchen, exercising, reading, hanging out with my family, or on the tennis court.
