Bradley S. Ellison, MD

Bio

Dr. Bradley S. Ellison, MD is a board-certified fellowship-trained hip and knee reconstruction specialist. His practice emphasizes hip and knee joint preservation and reconstruction through the use of innovative surgical techniques, including anterior hip replacement, customized total knee replacements, small incision primary hip and knee replacements, hip arthroscopy, hip resurfacing, partial knee replacements, as well as revision hip and knee joint reconstruction. Dr. Ellison and his team place special focus on minimizing perioperative pain, rapid recovery protocols, and optimizing the experience and satisfaction of patients undergoing hip and knee surgery. Dr. Ellison is a native of North Carolina, who worked in private practice in Richmond, Virginia for five years, prior to joining OrthoCarolina and returning home. In his career, he has performed over 2,000 hip and knee surgical procedures. Poised with advanced fellowship training and extensive expertise, he is routinely sought after to evaluate patients with complex problems around the hip and knee, such as persistent pain from injury, developmental and degenerative disorders, as well as previous surgical treatment.
